

AGREEMENT CONCERNING A CONTRIBUTIVE ESSAY

Date: March 17, 2010

To: Bernard Teissier (the “Author”)

Princeton University Press (the “Press”) is pleased to have the privilege of publishing your essay entitled Mathematics and Narrative: why are stories and proofs interesting? (the “Essay”) in the Work entitled: Mathematics and Narrative (the “Work”) edited by: Apostolos Doxiadis and Barry Mazur.

So that you as Author and the Press as Publisher of the Work may be protected from the consequences of unauthorized use of its contents, the Press considers it essential to register the copyright. To this end, we ask you to grant us all rights to your Essay. As copyright proprietor, the Press will exercise its rights according to the following agreement:

1. The Press agrees to publish the essay in the Work on the condition that the Essay is accepted for publication by the Press’s Editorial Board, at its sole discretion. The Press may make the manuscript conform to a style of presentation, spelling, capitalization, and usage which it deems appropriate. You shall have the opportunity to read and correct the edited manuscript and agree to return the corrected manuscript to the Press or to the volume editor, as arranged. Whether you will be shown proofs will be determined by the volume editor in consultation with the Press. If you are asked to check the proofs, the Press may charge you for expenses incurred as a result of changes in proofs beyond 5% of the costs of original composition (corrections being much more costly than original composition).
2. You represent and warrant that you are the sole proprietor of the Essay and that you have full power to make this Agreement and grant; that the Essay does not infringe the copyright or other proprietary rights of any other person; that the work contains no libelous or other unlawful matter and makes no improper invasion of the privacy of any other person; that any recipe, formula or instruction contained in the Essay is not injurious to the user; and that you have not previously assigned, pledged or otherwise encumbered the same or agreed to do so. If the Essay includes any material requiring permission from copyright owners, you will secure and pay for such permission at your expense and furnish us with written evidence that you have done so. You shall indemnify, hold harmless and defend the Press from all manner of claims based upon an alleged violation of any of these representations and warranties. The provisions of this Section Two shall survive any termination of this Agreement.
3. You grant to the Press exclusive world-wide rights in the Essay with the full copyright therein, including the right to publish it in all forms, languages, and media now or hereafter known or developed. Permissions for photocopying will be controlled by the Press either directly or through the Copyright Clearance Center, of which the Press is a member. Copyright will be registered in the name of the Press.
4. Upon your request, the Press will grant you gratis a nonexclusive license to republish the Essay in revised form in any language in a book written or edited by you after the Work has been published. The Press will then inform you of the required wording of the copyright wording. The Press will not refuse your request for such republication unless it judges the proposed use of the Essay to be direct competition with the Work.
5. Upon publication of the Work, the Press will send you one free copy of the Work. you may purchase additional copies of the Work for your own use (but not for resale) by direct order to the Press at a 40% discount from the list price.

6. You agree to submit the Work to the Press, and that the Work will consist of no more than 11,000 words and 11 illustrations.

7. As total compensation, the Press shall provide you with 1 gratis copies of the hardcover edition.

8. Upon publication, you may keep a copy of your essay on your website if you so desire.
